The Calvary Bible College and Calvary Theological Seminary standard for the preparation of any research paper or thesis is the 7th edition of Turabian. This supplement takes precedence over Turabian when the two differ.

TYPE OF PAPER TO BE WRITTEN

Teachers should differentiate between non-research papers, research papers, and theses. A non-research paper is required to be in Non-Research Turabian format. The standard for this type of paper is specified in the next section. From this point on, the designation of research paper and full Turabian paper will be synonymous. Any paper designated as a research paper or thesis must be in Research Turabian style. A research paper 20 pages or longer should be in thesis form (including a contents page and chapters). Master’s students in the Seminary must write a thesis in Research Turabian format. When an assignment does not fall into one of the above three categories, the professor will supply the students with clear formatting instructions in writing and/or the actual form on which they want the assignment completed.

NON-RESEARCH PAPER

A non-research paper is any paper which does not require research (e.g. abstracts, book reports, personal response papers, ALP- Applied Learning Papers, etc.). There will be no title page, blank page, outline page, contents page, or bibliography in a non-research paper. The upper left-hand corner of the paper will appear as follows:

Dale Jones   (Name of Student)
EN111 Grammatical Analysis   (Number and Title of Course)
Marda Jones   (Instructor of Course - without title)
4/08/05   (Date of Submission of Paper)

The TITLE of the paper will be on this same page in ALL CAPS, centered, 2” from the top of the page. All other margins are 1”. Single-space the assignment information. Starting with the title, the paper will be double-spaced. Page numbers will start on page 2 in the right-hand corner of the header, 0.75” from the top and 1” from the right. Italicized headings will be used in non-research papers.

- Non-research papers follow the rules and guidelines stated in the Important General Writing Information section of the style guide (pp. 9–10).
- Sections or entire papers that are opinion or application papers should follow all of the above requirements, with the exception of the use of third person. For whatever portion of the paper that is involved, the variance should be clearly stated by the professor.

Embedded citations may be used when necessary instead of footnotes.

- Place the following in parentheses at the end of the sentence the first time the source is cited: (Full Name of the Author, Full Name of the Work Cited, Page Number or Full Web Page Address if using an internet source. Include date accessed when citing a web page). Examples follow: (Marilee Sprenger, How to Teach So Students Remember, 48–49) and (John Piper, “God's Covenant with Abraham (Genesis 17:1–8),” www.soundofgrace.com/piper83/120483m.htm September 13, 2010).

- Second and subsequent times the same work is cited: use an abbreviated title of the book and the page number.
- When quoting Scripture in a non-research paper, place the reference and the translation in parenthesis after the quotation [e.g. “…eternal life” (John 3:16 NASB-U)]. This will indicate the translation that is being used throughout the paper. If a subsequent translation is used, follow the same format inserting the new translation [e.g. “…eternal life” (John 3:16 NIV)].

Refer to Appendix B (p. 39) to see a sample of the Non-Research format. If writing an abstract, see Appendix C (p. 42) to see the Instructions for Writing an Abstract.

Research Papers/Theses

Title Page

A TITLE PAGE should be used on a research paper or a thesis. The format given in the sample paper should be followed for all papers in the college. Notice that the title of the instructor is not to be used. For example, Dr. Keith Miller should be written as Keith Miller. No blank pages are to be inserted in any paper that is not a thesis.

Seminary only: The seminary research paper Title Page follows a different format from the college’s research paper Title Page. See Appendix D on p. 47 of this guide. The seminary thesis also uses a separate format for the Title Page. The date on this Title Page should always be the student’s month of graduation and the year (without an intervening comma), not the date submitted. See Appendix D on p. 48 in this guide.

Outline and Contents

- An OUTLINE containing one capitalized Roman numeral level (I., II., III., etc.) should be used for research papers under 20 pages. A period should follow each numeral.
- The word OUTLINE in ALL CAPS should be centered 2” from the top of the page.
- The outline should match only centered major italicized headings (1st rank headings) in the body of the paper, even if subheadings are used. Page numbers that reference the paper’s content are not needed.
- The left margin should be 1”, but the information (I. Introduction, etc.) should be indented to the 2” mark. The outline should be double-spaced. See the sample paper for an example of an outline (Appendix A, p. 30).
- The Roman numeral ii should be centered at the bottom of the page in the footer (see Pagination section for footer settings).

centered at the bottom of the page. Remember, the headings and subheadings within chapters must match those listed in the CONTENTS page.

Spacing and Indentions

- The title page is single-spaced and is manually changed to double-spaced.
- The outline is double-spaced.
- The body of all papers is to be double-spaced.
  - Block quotations and footnotes are single-spaced.
  - There should be no extra spaces between headings and text.
- The bibliography is single-spaced.
- Indent the 1st line of a paragraph – ½”.
- Indent the 1st line of footnotes – ½”.
- Indent an entire block quote – ½”.
  - The paragraph indentation in a block quote, if needed, will be an additional ¼”.

Spacing must be one space (not two) after all punctuation including periods, question marks, and exclamation points at the end of a sentence.

Margins

The Title Page, Outline, first page of a paper, and Bibliography should have a top margin of 2”; all other margins are to be 1” (including the left margin). The right margin is to be unjustified.

Seminary only: The margins for a thesis will be 1 ½” on the left margin (for binding purposes).

Headings

Headings for major sections of the paper are centered 2” below the top of the paper and are typed in full capital letters, with Arabic numerals used for chapter numbers (e.g., TITLE OF PAPER, BIBLIOGRAPHY, CHAPTER 1). Note: There are to be no extra spaces between headings and text anywhere in a paper. Never end a page with a heading!

If a section is subdivided, there must be at least two divisions. For example, there must be at least two non-italicized centered headings, etc., if one is used. The four ranks of subheadings are as follows:

Italicized Centered Heading  [1st rank]
The first letter of all nouns, pronouns, adjectives, adverbs, and verbs is capitalized.

Centered Heading (Not Italicized)  [2d rank]
The first letter of all nouns, pronouns, adjectives, adverbs, and verbs is capitalized

Italicized Subheading  [3d rank]
The first letter of all nouns, pronouns, adjectives, adverbs, and verbs is capitalized

Subheading (Not Italicized)  [4th rank]
The first letter of all nouns, pronouns, adjectives, adverbs, and verbs is capitalized
A centered heading of more than forty-eight characters must be divided into two or more single-spaced lines, arranged in an inverted pyramid:

Announced Faith in Christ Surprisingly as the Mark of Many Who Ultimately Reject Jesus in John's Gospel

A heading of more than half a line must be divided into two or more single-spaced lines:

Jesus Repeatedly Teaches His Disciples the Same Lesson

Quotations

It is the writer's responsibility to quote material exactly as it occurs in the original work. If the writer needs to change an occasional word for flow or clarity, brackets are used to indicate the change. "We love because [God] first loved us" (1 John 4:19). Avoid plagiarism at all costs. Plagiarism is defined as copying any part of a book or paper without identifying the author. This also includes taking another person's ideas and presenting them as your own. (Refer to the next section for more information on citing resources—"How to Avoid Plagiarism")

Quoting Scripture: A notice of the predominate Bible translation used (unless it is the student’s own translation) should appear in a footnote of the first scriptural quotation in a research paper or in the introduction of a thesis. The following notice should be used: Unless otherwise noted, Scripture quotations in this study are taken from the [Translation], copyright (or) © [year and copyright holder]. The brackets [ ] are for emphasis in this section and should not be in the footnote. Note: this source is not included in the bibliography unless something other than Scripture is quoted from it, such as information from a study note. Inform the reader when an alternate translation to this one is used, e.g., (Luke 21:7 NASB). Writers who know the original languages should strive to use their own translation of the Scriptures but notice should be given if one Scripture translation is used predominately.

Quotes and block quotes should be held to a minimum. It is preferable that students reword and condense the original author’s ideas. Use short, pertinent, direct quotations that accurately reflect the author’s opinion when necessary. If significant words are lifted directly from a source, those words must be placed in quotation marks or in a block quote and footnoted. Ideas should also be footnoted if obtained from another source. Turabian § 25 gives other information dealing with quotations.

Block quotes must be 4 full lines minimum, single-spaced, and should be indented ½”. The paragraph indentation in a block quote, if needed, will be an additional ¼”. Quotation marks are not used at the beginning and end of block quotes. Quotations under four full lines are to be put in quotation marks within the double-spaced format.

Secondary sources should be avoided (i.e., when writer A cites writer B, the student must obtain a copy of the original source B to quote from it rather than quoting the words of writer
How to Avoid Plagiarism

Calvary Bible College’s Student Handbook defines plagiarism as “copying any part of a book or paper without identifying the author. This also includes taking another person’s ideas and presenting them as your own.” Put more simply, this means not giving credit where credit is due, i.e., stealing someone else’s words, thoughts, or ideas by trying to pass them off as your own. Abide by the following guidelines in order to honestly cite materials used:

1. Any unique term or idea used by an author must be placed in quotation marks and footnoted.

   E.g., Ben Johnson’s “Basic Z”1 hand motion is an essential part of his speed reading program.
   - Use quotation marks around the term; insert a footnote. The only exception to this guideline is if the information is considered to be common knowledge, something everyone probably knows.

   E.g., George Bush was Governor of Texas before he became President of the United States.
   - No quotation marks or footnote necessary.

2. Any direct copying of an author’s words or terms up to four full lines of text must be placed in quotation marks and footnoted. Note: the need to document the source applies if you are using another student’s work as well.

   E.g., Speed reading requires practice in order to perfect the technique. Even so, “different kinds of materials ought to be read at different speeds. For instance, you may read a novel at 250 wpm and a theology book at 125 wpm. But if you double your reading rate in one, you will probably double in the other.”2 Of course, this kind of progress does not happen without effort being exerted.
   - Use double spacing, quotation marks, and footnote; finish the original paragraph.

1 Ben E. Johnson, Rapid Reading (Glendale, CA: Regal, 1973), 32.

2 Ibid., 34.
3. Quoting author’s words when it is more than four full lines of text:

E.g., O God . . . we humbly beseech Thee . . . Lay not more upon us, O heavenly Father, than Thou wilt enable us to bear; and since the fretfulness of our spirits is more hurtful than the heaviness of our burden, grant us that heavenly calmness which comes of owning Thy hand in all things, and patience in the trust that Thou doest all things well. Amen.3

- Indent left margin, single space, no quotation marks, insert footnote.

4. When using, but not quoting, an author’s words, terms, or ideas, quotation marks are not necessary; but footnoting is necessary.

E.g. of paraphrasing the material quoted previously: Christians so often wear themselves out by worrying over life’s difficulties, rather than finding the rest for their souls that is available through surrendering themselves to their heavenly Father’s care.4

- The paraphrase does not use the author’s words; rather, it captures the author’s meaning, using your own wording. Since the ideas are still original with the author, you must insert a footnote and give them credit for the material.

5. If the author directly quotes another author in his work that you want to quote, seek to find the original author’s work and base your footnoting/bibliography information from that source (known as the primary source).

6. When the primary source is not available, consult Sample Footnote and Bibliographic Form (bottom of p. 24) for information about how to cite a secondary source.

7. If you have further questions, consult The Learning Center for advice about documentation issues.

Footnotes

4 Ibid.
Footnotes (not endnotes) are required in all research papers and theses.

Use footnote style Turabian § 16.1.1 with the superscript reference number (e.g., Miller, The Book of Jesus, 24). Footnotes will default to Times New Roman, 10 point, which is correct.

The footnote reference number goes after the punctuation ending the sentence.

The full form of footnotes should be used for the first citation of a work in a research paper and in each chapter of a thesis (Turabian § 16.4). The first line of every footnote is to be indented ½” (Turabian §16.1.7). Seminary only: A full form used in chapter one must thus be repeated in full the first time it is used in a subsequent chapter.

Footnotes should be numbered consecutively, starting with the number 1 at the beginning of a research paper, or of each chapter in a thesis.

Footnotes are placed, or at least must begin, on the page of text to which they refer.

It is correct to leave the default space (in Microsoft Word) between the superscripted footnote number and the footnote information.

Single-space footnotes with one blank single space between each note (Turabian § 16.3.4).

The first footnote reference mark on a page should be flush with, or very close to, the separator line.

The name of each periodical that appears in the abbreviation list should be abbreviated from the outset. (See p. 17–18 in this guide.) Consistency is key in this area!

Two or more initials in a person's name should be separated just as normal words or names are (C. E. B. Cranfield, not C.E.B. Cranfield).

Be consistent when citing the same work in your notes or bibliography.

A footnote is also an appropriate place to interact with related ideas.

Repeated references: For a repeated reference of a source after the full form has been cited once, cite the last name of the author, a shortened version of the title, and page number. (Ryrie, Basic Theology, 135.)

Consecutive references: The use of Ibid. (an abbreviation of ibidem = in the same place) may refer only to the exact same work immediately preceding. Note: The consecutive reference for which the Ibid. is used may be on a following page. Ibid. is to be followed by a period, a comma, and the page number referenced—unless the page is exactly the same as in the previous reference. Only the first letter of Ibid. is capitalized, and the abbreviation is not to be italicized or underlined. See Turabian § 16.4.2.

Bibliography

Research papers and theses must include a bibliography. It will include all works cited in the paper plus all quality works consulted in order to write the paper, in order to benefit the student and reader. The Bible should not be listed in the bibliography unless something other than a verse is quoted. The bibliography is to be alphabetized by last name: A-Z. Consult this manual, pp. 19–29, and Turabian § 16.1 for examples of bibliographic form.

Seminary only: Bibliographies for research papers and theses should divide the works into the following divisions with an italicized heading preceding each division: Books, Journal Articles, Dictionaries and Encyclopedias, Theses and Other Unpublished Works, and Electronic Sources.
Internet sources will be placed under Electronic Sources. Not all papers will have works that fit into all these divisions.

Pagination

- The title page should not have a page number.
- The outline (or contents) should have a Roman numeral ii centered at the bottom of the page.
- The first page of a research paper should have the numeral 1 centered at the bottom of the page 0.9 inches from the bottom of the page (in the footer).
- On all other pages of the body, type the page number in the upper right-hand corner of the header, 0.75 inches from the top and 1.0 inches from the right edge of the paper. In Appendix E computer instructions are given on how to properly format page numbers.
- All pages in the bibliography should continue the numbering of the body of the paper. The page number of the first page is centered at the bottom in the footer. For all following pages, it is in the upper right hand corner of the header, 0.75 inches from the top and 1.0 inches from the right.
- See Appendix E for step by step instructions for paginating a paper.

Seminary only: For theses, assign a number to every page except the Abstract and the blank pages; do not type a number on any of the pages before the Acknowledgment Page (or the Contents Page, if there is no Acknowledgements Page). Use small Roman numerals for the preliminaries (before the body of the paper, e.g., ii, iii). On pages with a major heading (e.g., Contents, Abbreviations, Chapter, and Bibliography), center the page number 0.9 inches from the bottom of the page.

Order for a Thesis

Seminary only: the order for theses should be as follows (Omit parts that are not applicable):

- Blank Page
- Abstract
- Blank Page
- Title Page
- Acceptance Sheet
- Acknowledgment Page (optional)
- Contents Page
- List of Illustrations (optional)
- List of Tables (optional)
- Abbreviations
- Body of Thesis or Project
- Appendices (optional)
- Bibliography
- 2 Blank Pages

Important General Writing Information

1. Essential: Protect yourself from losing data by frequently saving your work, by keeping at least one back-up disk, CD, or memory stick copy of each computer document every time the document is revised, by printing out at least one hard copy (paper copy) of your writing or revision as soon as feasible, by working on relatively fresh disks, and by being familiar with the operation of your computer and word processing program. Keep your disks and hard copies in a safe place in organized condition.

2. Font: Times New Roman, 12 point, is the only accepted font for any paper. Change your default font to Times New Roman. By doing this, the footnotes will default to Times New Roman, 10 point, which is correct. If you do not set you default font to Times New Roman, you must change the font manually for the body of the paper, the footnotes section, and the page numbering. The student may not modify this font or use any other font. Papers are to be done on white 20-pound paper using a laser or ink jet printer. Titles of books and journals, and subheadings are to be italicized. Use italics (not bold face) for emphasis infrequently and with discretion.

   ▪ Foreign languages: Greek or Hebrew or certain other foreign alphabet fonts may be included in any type of paper when appropriate. Greek and Hebrew words should be typed, not transliterated. All diacritical (breathing marks, accents, etc.) marks should be included when typing Greek words. Only consonants are necessary when typing Hebrew words.

3. Biblical Text:
   ▪ Use Arabic numerals for books of the Bible (e.g., 1 Timothy, not I Timothy).
   ▪ The names of biblical books should be written out in full when referring to whole books or to whole chapters (e.g., In Genesis 3, several important . . . ).
   ▪ If a biblical reference begins a sentence and First or Second or Third appears in the title of a biblical book, it should always be written out in full (e.g., Second Timothy is the book . . . or First John 1:9 gives instruction on . . . ).
   ▪ When used in notes, parentheses, or in the body of the paper, abbreviate books of the Bible when referring to both chapter and verse according to the guide in this manual, p. 11–12. Notice that a period does not follow the abbreviation. (e.g., Several observations from Matt 24:36 include . . . )
   ▪ The abbreviation for verse is v. and for verses is vv. (vv. 34–36).
   ▪ No space follows a colon when it is used in scriptural references (e.g., Matt 24:34).
   ▪ See the Quotations section for how to cite Scripture.
   ▪ Use an en dash or elongated hyphen (–) between inclusive numbers (e.g., Matt 24:32–35).
   ▪ Type Ctrl plus the minus (-) on the numerical keyboard to get an en dash. On a laptop keyboard, type Ctrl plus F10 plus ; key to get an en dash.
   ▪ Pronouns referring to deity should not be capitalized unless they start a sentence (use: he, him, his, himself, etc. not He, Him, His, Himself). This differs from popular piety, but is correct academic usage following the Chicago Manual of Style (the basis of Turabian style).
Note that the KJV and NIV follow this rule. See the Capitalization/Lowercasing Glossary (p. 12) for other theologically-related words.

- Capitalize Bible and Scripture but not biblical and scriptural.

4. Specific Punctuation Rules:
   - No space follows a colon when it is used in scriptural references and in separating hours and minutes (e.g., Matt 24:34; 7:45 p.m.).
   - Leave no space before or after hyphens or dashes.
   - Use a hyphen (-) in hyphenated words.
   - Use an en dash or elongated hyphen (–) between inclusive numbers (e.g., 1,090–99; Matt 24:32–35). Type Ctrl plus the minus sign (−) on the numerical keyboard to get an en dash (See #3 Biblical Text for laptop instructions).
   - Use an em dash (—) to indicate a sudden break in the sentence (Turabian § 21.7.2).

5. Numbers: All numbers through one hundred and any of the whole numbers followed by hundred, thousand, hundred thousand, million, and so on are to be spelled out. Numbers over 100 that are not whole are to be left as ordinals (e.g. 1,001; 222; 5,183). Exceptions to this rule include time, years, and scriptural references (e.g. 7:45 a.m., 1975, Matt 7:14). Numbers are to be written out when beginning a sentence (Two years ago . . .).

6. Percentages: Percentages that are under 100 need to be spelled out as well as the word percent (e.g. five percent, fifty-nine percent). Percentages of 100 and over should use the ordinal form of the number (e.g. 107 percent). Note: this contradicts the guidelines on “5. Numbers” for whole numbers above 100; however, when writing percentages, follow this format.

7. A state name may be abbreviated when used in the body of a paper. (In Belton, MO . . .)

8. Never divide a word at the end of a page. Avoid one and two-letter word divisions at the end of a line. Never end a page with a heading. Avoid having a single line of a paragraph (a "widow") on one page. Set the "widow/orphan control" in the paragraph setting to prevent this.

9. A.D. precedes the date and B.C. follows it (e.g., A.D. 70; 536 B.C.).

10. With the exception of sic (by which the writer assures the reader that the incorrect spelling, word, or logic is in the original quotation), scholarly Latin abbreviations should be typed in roman (e.g., ibid., et al., i.e.). The brackets around sic should not be italicized.

11. Paragraphs, Sentences, and Type of Language
   - Paragraphs consist of two or more sentences. Avoid incomplete and run-on sentences.
   - There must be at least two paragraphs on a page.
   - Avoid paragraphs longer than ¾ of a page and long, complicated sentences.
   - Do not use contractions.
   - Research and Non-research papers are to be written in formal, academic style using the third person. Any form of first or second person is never acceptable and must not be used. This includes “I” (first person singular), “we (first person plural),” and “you.” Instead, use words or phrases such as: one, a person, the writer, etc. For example, if you as the writer of the paper wanted to express and opinion about something, it is incorrect to write “I believe . . . ” However, it is acceptable and correct to write “The writer of this paper believes . . . ” because this is done in third person. Students should avoid emotional language, contractions, slang, popular clichés, superfluous words and phrases, and exclamations (and exclamation marks) in writing.

- Clarity is a high priority in a research paper. This requires proper spelling and grammar, outlining, organization, appropriate use of subheadings, and careful thought of how to make sure one’s readers comprehend the points being made. Write for the reader. Consistency is key in any research paper or thesis.

Abbreviations of Bible Books and the Apocrypha

Calvary Bible College and Calvary Theological Seminary have adopted the abbreviation of Bible books required by the Journal of Biblical Literature Handbook of Style (Peabody, MA: Hendrickson, 1999).

Citing Electronic Media

1. Make it easy for the professor or other readers to find exactly what you have found.
2. Refer to electronic sources only when items are not available in published form elsewhere.
3. Make sure the electronic address is accurate even to the spaces and the dots, etc.
4. Hyperlink should be removed and website should be underlined.

- The most important items necessary when citing a website are the accurate web address and the date the information was accessed.
- The author and title of article should be included if available, as well as any other important information that is available. This includes the name and issue date of magazine and newspaper articles.

Note: First cite the book/article from the CD-Rom and then cite the print source from which it came. Citations from sources found in Logos software should follow the guidelines previously given for the type of material that it is, i.e. books, dictionaries, etc. However, at the end of the entry “[Logos]” should appear.

Normative Guidelines for Interpreting Acts

Introduction

There are widely divergent attitudes toward the use of historical precedence for establishing ecclesiological doctrine. It is very common to assume that the church today is to be as nearly identical to the church as described in the book of Acts as possible. “By and large, most sectors of evangelical Protestantism have a ‘restoration movement’ mentality. We regularly look back to the church and Christian experience in the first century as the norm to be restored or the ideal to approximated.”

On the other hand, it appears to be more popular in recent years to cavalierly dismiss any possible relevance of Acts from consideration in ecclesiological discussions. A pastor friend of the writer was recently heard to declare, “Well, everybody knows that you can’t prove anything about elders from the book of Acts.”

Fee has well stated the problem posed in seeking to establish normative polity based on New Testament example.

The hermeneutical problem of Acts, therefore is a crucial one and touches many parts of Scripture which are basically historical narrative. How is the book of Acts, which prima facie narrates a small segment of the early spread of Christianity, to be understood as the Word of God? That is, what is its Word which not merely describes the primitive Church but speaks as a norm to the Church at all times? Indeed, do such narratives somehow establish normative precedents for succeeding generations? Or are they merely

1 Gordon D. Fee and Douglas Stuart, How to Read the Bible for All Its Worth: A Guide to Understanding the Bible (Grand Rapids: Zondervan, 1982), 88.
illustrative or informative? If they do have a word for us, and I think they do, how does one discover it, or set up principles in order to hear it?²

Is there any hope for resolution of such a critical question? Not all aspects of the issue can be included in a brief paper.³ The following principles are offered as a guide in this difficult area.

Principles of Interpretation

Precedence of Doctrinal Passages

Explicit doctrinal passages and commands have precedence over historical narrative.⁴ There are many doctrinal passages in Scripture that are specifically intended to teach particular doctrinal truth or to require specific action of God’s people. There are numerous commands addressed specifically to the church. In these instances, there is little dispute regarding the believer’s obligation. Such texts must form the primary basis of ecclesiological decisions. For example, the “filling and coming upon” the believer in Acts 2, 10, and 19 with the resultant speaking in tongues does not take precedent over the doctrinal command in Eph 5:18 NIV, “Instead be filled with the Spirit.”

Historical Precedence Alone

Historical narrative records what did happen in a given situation. It does not prescribe what must happen in every subsequent situation. Historical precedence alone should never form the basis for normativeness. “On the basis of precedence alone it is probably not valid to say,

‘Therefore, one must.’"5 "Just through being reported as truly happening, no event becomes the revelation of God’s universal will."6

Scriptural Corroboration

Practices based on historical precedence are most clearly normative if corroborated by principles elsewhere in Scripture. There may not be a specific command addressing the situation, but there will be relevant theological principles that can be established from other prescriptive passages.7

Non-Contradictory

It should be obvious, but for the sake of clarity, a principle claiming support from historical narrative cannot contradict explicit statements found elsewhere in the epistles. “The meaning and principles derived from a story must be consistent with all other teachings of Scripture. A deductive principle drawn from a narrative which contradicts the teaching of some other scriptural passages is invalid.”8

It is perhaps valid to defend a given practice on the basis of precedence if there is substantial evidence for its practice and that pattern can be demonstrated to be the only pattern present. A consistent and clear pattern must be established. Specifically, polity considerations

7 “For a biblical precedent to justify present action, the principle of the action must be taught elsewhere, where it is the primary intent so to teach.” Fee, “Genre of NT Literature,” 118. Although addressing a slightly different issue, the following comment is also relevant. “When these injunctions to a specific individual or group parallel general reaching found elsewhere, they may be viewed as normative, but not on their own strength.” McQuilkin, “Normativeness in Scripture,” 235.

based on Acts may be valid if the matter is both widespread (the actions of many churches reflect such a practice in the narrative) and unique (it is the only way in which the churches did something). “The strongest possible case can be made when only one pattern is found . . . and when that pattern is repeated within the New Testament itself.”

9 Fee and Stuart, How to Read the Bible, 102.

Positive Versus Negative

In establishing patterns, it must be recognized that positive patterns are clearer than negative patterns. In other words, the fact that something was done is more significant than something that was not done—unless the text explicitly and emphatically states that a specific action was not involved. Arguments from silence are dubious and inconclusive in most instances.

Intention Versus Incidentals

Exegesis must emphasize the intention of the passage rather than incidental allusions.10 Historical narrative texts record numerous minor details. Although accurate descriptions of what actually happened, they are not to be elevated to the primary, didactic level unless the writer is clearly representing these details as significant to his primary thesis.11 For example, an exegete must be careful not to draw too many thematic principles from the death of a proud politician as found in Acts 12. On a related matter, it should be noted that “extensive passages on a subject take priority for theological purposes over brief allusions.”12

10 Ibid., 116.

11 They may, of course, illustrate specific teaching recorded elsewhere.

Conclusion

The book of Acts can be legitimately used to establish ecclesiological polity in the contemporary church. If these principles are followed consistently, the interpreter will not be guilty of wresting Scripture to teach something that God never intended.

Appendix B

SAMPLE NON-RESEARCH PAPER
LIVES WITHOUT BLEMISH

Introduction

One sunny afternoon on Adam’s Street, the sound of a garage door opening interrupts the soft coos of a pair of morning doves. An elderly gentleman who lives in the last remaining Victorian house on the street is beginning his morning. The man’s name is Mr. Pinkerton.

Washing and Cleanliness

Mr. Pinkerton climbs into his antique car and presses the starter button. After a few sputters, the gasoline engine comes to life. He presses the clutch, puts the vehicle into gear, and slowly backs it out of the garage. Once in the driveway, the radiant rays of sunshine reflect off the car the way light bounces off of a mirror. Not one spec of dirt can be seen on this beautiful red machine.

Mr. Pinkerton turns off the engine, tosses a tape measure that was in his pocket onto the seat, and climbs out of the driver’s seat. He gently glides his hand across the car’s side panels. His finger tips touch it gently searching for something. He brings them close to his face. After careful inspection, he heads into his garage.

He comes back out with a pale of water, a bottle, and a sponge. He measures the correct amount of soap, dumps it into the bucket of water, and throws the sponge into the water. Taking the soaked sponge from the pail, he begins to scrub. As the hour passes, he scrubs and scrubs and scrubs. After he has scrubbed the vehicle thoroughly, he heads back into the garage.
Mr. Pinkerton comes out with hose and a towel. He begins to wash the soap suds off of the antique car. As he does, it begins to gleam even more. A new shine seems to have appeared from underneath the paint, a new gleam. Gently he begins to dry the car with the towel. When it is completely dry, he slides the tips of his fingers along the body again, ever so gently. As he inspects his fingers once again, a grin of satisfaction wrinkles his face as a sign of approval that his work is complete.

Application

Man’s heart and soul are like Mr. Pinkerton’s car. The heart and soul may gleam from a distance. The actions produced from a person’s heart seem to reflect a heart and soul that is pure, without sin, unblemished. However, under further scrutiny, small specs of dust, dirt, and sin are revealed in the light of God’s righteousness, holiness, and glory.

Christ is like Mr. Pinkerton in a way. Christ brought out the soap, his life-blood, to cleanse and rinse man’s life of every spec of sin that dirties his heart and soul. Isaiah 64:6 states: “For we have all become like one who is unclean [ceremonially, like a leper], and all our righteousness (our best deeds of rightness and justice) is like filthy rags or a polluted garment; we all fade like a leaf, and our iniquities, like the wind, take us away [far from God’s favor, hurrying us toward destruction]” (Amplified Bible).

Even with the best acts of righteousness, man is still stained by sin. But the blood of Christ makes him clean. Christ brings a new shine to the heart and soul; new life that is eternal.

Conclusion

Like Mr. Pinkerton’s car, a man’s life seems clean. Unless Christ has been accepted into the heart and life of a person, it is still dirty, stained, blemished by sin. Soap cleanses the hands, not the heart. The blood of Christ is the only sufficient substance which removes the tarnish of sin and brings new life. “And there is salvation in and through no one else, for there is no other name under heaven given among men by and in which we must be saved” (Acts 4:12).

INSTRUCTIONS FOR WRITING AN ABSTRACT
INSTRUCTIONS FOR WRITING AN ABSTRACT

DEFINITION: A brief summary of the content of a journal, article, book or chapter of the book.

Mechanics/Form:
- Abstracts are generally five pages in length and double-spaced.
- Non-Research Turabian formatting is expected, which includes citing in the upper left-hand corner of the first page the student’s name, course # and name, instructor’s name, and date.
- The following heading should be centered 2” down from the top of the first page:

  AN ABSTRACT OF TITLE OF BOOK
  Author’s Name. Place of publication: Publisher, Date

- Page numeration begins on page 2, upper right-hand corner, .75”.
- Identify page numbers referred to in the text by placing the page numbers in parenthesis at the end of the sentence, e.g. (34).
- Clarity, spelling, punctuation, sentence construction, paragraphing, verb tense, neatness, etc. should all conform to standard Turabian guidelines.

Punctuality: Abstracts should be submitted on or before the due dates listed on the syllabus. They will not be accepted after the due date.

Abstracts include three components made up of short statements which summarize:

1) Author’s main points. Evaluation of the author’s main points should be precise and specific, highlighting primary and secondary points.

2) Critique of the material. How was it written? Was it interesting? Clear? Well-organized? Objectively written? Sensible? Practical? Was it well-researched? How could it have been improved? Do not be afraid to criticize nor be afraid to praise. Questions to address: What does the author say? How or why does he/she say it? State reasons to support your conclusions.

3) Your reaction (opinion) on the topic. What are your own thoughts or opinions about the subject of the material? Does it raise any other questions for you? How might you use it in your own life (or if you can’t, why not)? Include a Critical Evaluation which answers “What kind of job did he do?” Also include an Application section which answers the question “What did the book do for you?” This section may be written in 1st person.

CHAPTER 1

INTRODUCTION

Kingsbury, in his review of the commentary on Matthew by Davies and Allison, points out that they ignore new methods (literary criticism, canonical criticism, social-scientific studies) and by so doing make "virtually no allowance for the text to be heard 'from within' that is to say, on its own terms." Therefore he suggests that their interpretation of Matthew is "seriously flawed." He says that not only is the "so called objective, 'historical world'" they find "in reality the product of their own scholarly postulates," but that they effectively prove themselves unable to lead the reader to appreciate the narrative Matthew relates. Aspects central to the Gospel narrative such as "characterization" and "plot development" ("the dramatic movement of Matthew's gospel story") are completely ignored. And according to Kingsbury, since Davies and Allison pay no attention to plot development, their multitude of scholarly observations ironically may obscure and suppress, rather than illuminate Matthew's story.

COMPUTER INSTRUCTIONS
Setting Margins in Microsoft Word Version 2003 and earlier:

1. Margins should be set before beginning the writing process.
2. Click on File, then Page Setup, then click on the Margins tab.
3. For a research paper, the margins will be set to 1 inch. The only exception is if the professor requests your paper to be in a protective binder. Then the left margin will be 1.5 inches; the others will still be 1 inch.

Setting Margins in Microsoft Word 2007:

1. Margins should be set before beginning the writing process.
2. Click on the tab for the Page Layout ribbon, then Margins under the Page Setup group, then click on the Custom Margins.
3. For a research paper, the margins will be set to 1 inch. The only exception is if the professor requests your paper to be in a protective binder. Then the left margin will be 1.5 inches; the others will still be 1 inch.

Page numeration in Word 2003 and earlier:

Note: With the following instructions, only the Body of the Paper and the Bibliography Page are numbered. Separate documents will need to be made for the Title Page and Outline Page.

This method of pagination cannot be completed until you have completed the body of your paper.

1. Do NOT use the pagination function under the Insert menu. This will NOT provide Turabian Style pagination as is required by Calvary.
2. Begin by going to File, Page Setup, then click on the Layout tab. Set the Header to .75 inches and the Footer to .9 inches. Also place a check in the box next to Different first page. You do this because the page number is placed at the bottom center of the page for the first page of a paper, the first page of each chapter if you have chapters, and the first page of the bibliography. For most other pages, the page number is located at the top right.
3. Make sure the insertion point/cursor (not the same as the mouse pointer) is on the first page of the body of the paper.
4. Go to the View menu and click on Head and Footer.
5. Find the button labeled “Switch between header and footer” and click on it to switch to the footer.
6. Find the button labeled “Insert page number” and click on it once. This will insert a “1” in the footer.
7. Now use the alignment button on the formatting toolbar labeled “Center” to center the number at the bottom of the page.
8. Click on the “close” button on the Header and Footer toolbar.
9. Move your insertion point/cursor to the second page of your paper.
10. Go to the View menu and click on Head and Footer.
11. Find the button labeled “Insert page number” and click on it once. This will insert a “2” in the header.
12. Now use the alignment button on the formatting toolbar labeled “Align right” to right align the number at the top of the page.
13. Click on the “close” button on the Header and Footer toolbar.
14. At the end of the body of the paper before the Bibliography, go to the Insert menu and click on Break. Then click on Next Page under Section breaks and then click on OK. If you have followed all the steps, all of your paper will numbered appropriately. If you are writing a paper 20 pages or longer, you will have chapters and you will insert a Next page section break at the end of each chapter.

2. Make sure the insertion point/cursor (not the same as the mouse pointer) is on the first page of the body of the paper.
3. Go to the Insert ribbon.
4. In the Header and Footer Group, click on Page Number, click on Bottom of Page, and select Plain Number 2 or the style that places the number in the center.
5. Double click in the body of the paper and then place your cursor/insertion point on the second page of the paper. Again go to the Insert ribbon.
6. Again go to the Header and Footer Group, click on Page Number, click on Top of Page, and select Plain Number 3 or the style that places the number in the right corner of the page.
7. Now go to the end of the body of the paper. Place the cursor/insertion point at the end of the body of the paper before the Bibliography. Go to the Page Layout ribbon, and to the Page Setup Group, and click on Breaks. Then click on Next Page under Section breaks and then click on OK. If you have followed all the steps, all of your paper will numbered appropriately, including the Bibliography page. If you are writing a paper 20 pages or longer, you will have chapters and you will insert a Next page section break at the end of each chapter.
Entering an En Dash and an Em Dash (All Word Versions):

1. An En Dash is the separator between a range of numbers, like Matt 24:1–33. This is entered by pressing the Ctrl key and while holding that key down, pressing the minus key on the number pad of the keyboard (top right key of the number pad). This may also be entered by going to Insert, then Symbols, then choose the Special Characters tab. Find it in the list and insert it in your document.

2. An Em Dash is a longer symbol and is entered by holding down the Ctrl and Alt keys and then pressing the minus key on the keyboard (top right key of the number pad). This symbol is used when there is an interruption in the flow of a sentence. An alternate way to create an em dash is to type two hyphens between the two words it will separate with no spaces (ie. A—break). It can also be inserted by going to Insert, then Symbols, then choose the Special Characters tab. Find it in the list and insert it in your document.

Creating a Table of Contents Page in Word 2003 and earlier

All document setup for a research paper or thesis should be done prior to any actual typing of the paper. This specifically includes the following setup of headings that needs to be done to create a table of contents page.

First, the format for the different headings for the paper must be setup. By formatting, we mean such things as all caps or not, centered or left justified, italics or not, etc. Within a research paper 20 pages or longer, or a thesis, you may have up to 5 different headings. These are 1) chapter title, 2) first subheading, 3) second subheading, 4) third subheading, and 5) fourth subheading.

To format the above headings in Microsoft Word XP (2002), follow the procedure below:

1. Click on the menu selection Format, then click on Style. Press the Alt key and continue to hold down and then press L. Then select All Styles. In the window above that, you should now see an extensive list of styles. In this list, select Heading 1.

2. Now that you have selected Heading 1, click on the button labeled Modify. Next click on Format. Then click on Font.

3. Now the font window has appeared. For this heading, which is the heading for the chapter titles, select the font, Times New Roman, Regular, 12 point, and also place a check in the box next All caps. You have finished setting up the Font; click on OK and the Font window disappears and you are back to the Modify Style window.

4. Click on Modify again, then click on Paragraph. Here you will define the justification and spacing for the heading. Alignment is to be set to Centered. Spacing Before is set to 12pt. Spacing After is set to 0pt. Line spacing is set Double. Click on OK on all windows until you are back to where you see your blank document.

5. You will follow the above steps for the remaining 4 subheadings by selecting the following headings and settings for each heading:
Second, as you type your paper, when it is time for a heading, select the appropriate Heading from the Formatting tool bar (from the Style window on the left) and then type the text of the heading.

After you have completed your paper, insert page numbers in the paper.

Assuming you have completed the steps above, now you are ready to create a Table of Contents page. Follow these steps:

1. Go to the top of your paper—a short cut is Ctrl-Home. Click on Insert, then Break, then Page Break, then on OK. You have just created a blank page at the beginning of your paper. Again click on Ctrl-Home to go to the top of that blank first page.

2. Click on Insert, then Index and Tables… Change Show levels to 1. This will only show the chapter headings with the appropriate page numbers. The subheadings for a research paper or theses will then be typed in under the appropriate chapter. Now click on OK. You have now created a Table of Contents page based on the headings you created before you began typing the paper and applied as you typed the paper.

Note there still remains some formatting to be done to the Table of Contents page. See the examples in Appendix D for a complete example of a Table of Contents.
