QUESTIONING AS WE WRITE

Do you view writing as a passive activity? In other words, you write whatever comes to your mind, sentence by sentence, until you have written the assigned length.

In order to produce quality writing, you must:

- Choose a subject or idea of importance.
- Decide on something important to say about it.
- Explain or elaborate your basic meaning.
- Construct examples that will help readers connect what you are saying to events and experiences in their lives.
- Construct one or more analogies and/or metaphors that will help readers connect what you are writing about with something similar in their lives.

Then, as you write, join other skilled writers who question their writing as they write.

Question to understand; question to evaluate what you are writing; question to bring important ideas into your thinking. Become a good writer by asking the following questions while you write.

- Why am I writing this? What is my purpose? What do I want the reader to come away with?
- Is there some part of what I have written that I don't really understand?
 Am I repeating what I have heard people say without ever having thought through the meaning?
- If something I have written is vague, how can I make it clearer or more precise?
- Do I understand the meaning of the key words that I have used, or do I need to look them up in the dictionary?
- Am I using any words in special or unusual ways? Have I explained special meanings to the reader?
- Am I sure that what I have said is accurate? Do I need to qualify anything?
- Am I clear about my main point and why I think it is important?
- Do I know what question my paragraph answers?
- Do I need to spend more time investigating my topic or issue? Do I need more information?
